Dear Dr. Antonio Paez,

Thank you for submitting your manuscript to Higher Education. The topic is of interest to us, and your reasoning and writing are clear. Unfortunately, however, we are not able to consider your manuscript for inclusion in the journal.

Due to the high volume of submissions - we can publish only between 8 and 9 per cent of initial manuscripts received - we find that we need to be extremely selective about the manuscripts we send out for review. Our experience has been that manuscripts with more than one substantial deficiency rarely become publishable articles unless the contents are of major significance in their original ideas or findings.

The main issue with your manuscript is that it assumes the form of a commentary, historical brief, essay, or opinion editorial. These are formats that the journal does not publish. Although the thematic is important and timely, you may want to find a proper venue for the publication of this type of contribution.

Due to the high volume of submissions we receive, we find that we need to be extremely selective about the manuscripts we send out for review and wish you all the best with your work in future, and hope that you find the right kind of journal for the manuscript.
